Where it all began

NEIL Paulett graduated from the Roseworthy Oenology course in 1971 and began working as a winemaker for Penfolds Wines in Sydney and then Rosemount in the Hunter Valley.

With 10 years wine making experience behind him, Neil and wife Alison began their search for the place to establish their own family vineyard.

After discovering the Clare Valley in 1981, they set about purchasing the land where Pauletts is now based.

The property had been in the same family's hands from the 1860s until its purchase in 1983 and has a long history of vineyard production with vines being present for well over 100 years.

The property has expanded from the initial 47 hectares to 147 hectares, with 25 hectares of vines.

In 2013 Pauletts celebrated the 30th anniversary of its cellar door.

The cellar door has become one of the 'must see' places in the Clare Valley, often described as having the most spectacular view from any cellar door in the country.

"Thirty years ago, visiting a cellar door was not as common as now and we felt we had to offer that extra inducement to bring people to the Valley," Neil said.

"Now it's just considered all part of the package, a welcoming cellar door, the premium wines and spectacular views all enhance the sense of well-being that wine lovers have come to expect from Paulett's Winery."

The range of wines produced has grown over the years and as well as Shiraz and Riesling there is, a Late Harvest Riesling, Trillians Sparkling Riesling, Chardonnay, Sauvignon Blanc, Shiraz, Cabernet and Malbec blend and a Cabernet Merlot.
